

GREGORIO URIBE

For Immediate Release
Washington D.C September 12, 2016

Almost two months after performing with his big band at a sold-out concert for Colombian Independence at the Warner Theater, Colombian singer, songwriter, accordionist and big band leader, Gregorio Uribe will be back in Washington DC to perform at Tropicalia.

This time around Uribe will be hitting DC with a smaller more intimate trio set-up, more reminiscent of the traditional vallenato format from his native Colombia. The trio will be performing original music of cumbia, vallenato and other Colombian rhythms that promise a festive and bustling feel that will have you up on your feet dancing the night away.

Opening for Gregorio Uribe will be local beloved band Los Gaiteros De San Guashington. The night promises to be an evening full of celebration and South American swing, making it perfect to kick off Hispanic Heritage Month.

Gregorio Uribe, originally from Colombia, is a big band leader, singer, and accordionist based in New York City. Emerging as a graduate from the prestigious Berklee College of Music in Boston, Uribe leads the Gregorio Uribe Big Band, a 16-piece orchestra that blends cumbia and other Colombian rhythms with powerful big band arranging. Their debut album "Cumbia Universal"

(Zoho Music) featuring 8-time GRAMMY-winner and Latin music icon Rubén Blades, hit the Billboard charts upon its release and received widespread critical acclaim with performances selling out at Jazz at Lincoln Center in NY, Villa Victoria Center for the Arts in Boston and two concerts at the celebrated Teatro Colón in his native Bogotá, Colombia.

Additionally in the last few months, Uribe has been working on new songs and a fresh unique musical format . It consists of original more intimate songs that use rhythms like cumbia and vallenato with arrangements created for a smaller trio format (voice/accordion, bass, percussion) while still keeping the music just as danceable and lively as that of a big band.

Gregorio has been a guest artist with Carlos Vives on several occasions, most recently at Madison Square Garden Theater in NYC. He was also named by the government of Colombia as one of the "100 Most Successful Colombians Abroad". He has been an artist-in-residence at Dartmouth College and a commissioned composer for Grammy-winning Arturo O'Farrill and The Afro Latin Jazz Orchestra.
